PLO starts 'formal' talks with Syria

BEIRUT (R) - Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat has formally told Damascus that the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) would like to move to Syria if an agreement can be reached on evacuating his fighters from Beirut, informed sources said Wednesday. The sources said the move was part of Mr. Arafat's efforts to break a deadlock in talks aimed at ending the five-week war in Lebanon between the PLO and Israeli forces. The organisation has agreed to withdraw from Lebanon on certain conditions. But Syria brought progress in the negotiations to an abrupt halt last Friday by saying that it had no room for the commandes. The Syrian position appeared to be partly due to resentment by Damascus that it had not been properly consulted about a possible transfer of the PLO to its territory. The sources said the aim of Mr. Arafat's message, sent to President Hafez Al Assad Tuesday or the day before, was to set this right.

No rush for oil despite Gulf flare-up

LONDON (R) — The flare-up in the war in the oil-producing Gulf failed Wednesday to provoke any rush to buy crude oil in the spot, non-contract market, operators said. They said prices in North-west Europe declined very slightly with Saudi Arabian light crude quoted about 25 U.S. cents lower than Tuesday at around $31 a barrel. Spot prices, the oil industry barometer of market feeling, began to slip after the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) failed last weekend to set new output curbs. That suggested more oil would be available in an already surplusladen market. Brokers said that if Iran's thrust into Iraq had provoked jitters over future supply. this had yet to result in buying in the spot market where business was slack. "Traders feel that if you cannot make a reasonable assessment of what is going to happen, why put your money out? It is not the same as a flutter on the horses," said one broker.

Gold prices go up

LONDON (R) - Concern about the situation in the Middle East brought a sparkle to European Gold markets Wednesday as the metal traded around its highest levels for over two months. Dealers said the push by Iranian troops across the border into Iraq, fuelling fears of greater instability in the region, had helped maintain the price momentum after it rose sharply in New York on Tuesday. Gold traded as high as $356.75 an ounce Wednesday in Europe. although it slipped back to be set at $352.75 Wednesday afternoon by London bullion dealers. This was only $1 down on Wednesday morning's setting which was the highest "fixing" since late April when it reached $361.25 in the wake of Britain's announcement of a total exclusion zone around the Faikland Islands.

'disturbance' Israeli jets over Beirut on

BEIRUT (Agencies) — Israeli planes roared low over Palestinian commando positions in West Beirut Wednesday, increasing widely held fears that an uneasy three-day old truce around the city would not last long.

An Israeli military spokesman told reporters behind Israeli lines that the planes were not bombing and were either carrying out reconnaisance or seeking "to create whatever disturbance they

He said Israeli forces would not let the present lull in fighting become the status quo. "The end of the lull has to be unexpected and unpredictable," he said.

The ceasefire, arranged on Sunday night after a day of furious artiliery battles which left at least 60 people dead, has held despite a deadlock in negotiations for a peaceful resolution of the month-old siege. U.S. and Lebanese government officials struggling to get agree-

The chief snag in the peace talks was a refusal by Syria to take into its territory some 5,000 to 6,000 PLO fighters entrenched in West Beirut, as negotiators had prop-

But state-run Beirut Radio said Wednesday Mr. Khaddam was still in Damascus and it was widely feared here that he and Prince Saud might shelve their trip in view of the serious developments in the Gulf.

Palestinian sources also said they were worried that the Iranian move could create a diversion which might encourage Israel to launch a final assault on West Beirut, as it has threatened for some weeks.

PLO calls for talks with Washington

NEW YORK (R) - Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat has called for direct talks between the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) and the United States to find a solution to the situation in Leba-

Asked about the importance of talks with U.S. officials, Mr. Arafat told CBS Television News in an interview in Beirut: "I think it is one of the main keys to the resolution of the crisis."

In 1975, the U.S. undertook to have no direct talks with the PLO until it recognised Israel. Present negotiations with U.S. special envoy Philip Habib aimed at securing a withdrawal of PLO forces besieged in West Beirut by Israeli forces are being conducted through a number of intermediaries.

Mr. Arafat said: "To negotiate... with five or six channels, that method would not be accurate."

Asked whether this was what was preventing a solution to the situation, he replied: "It's one of the things, because I can't exactly understand what he (Habib) wants and he has to understand what I am looking for."

Reagan consults congressmen on troops for Lebanon

WASHINGTON (R) - President Reagan discussed the possibility of sending U.S. Marines to Lebanon with congressional leaders Tuesday as a first step to gaining their support for such a move. According to several participants, a key feature of the White House briefing was Mr. Reagan's assurance that he would notify Congress under the War Powers Act before sending U.S. troops into a possible combat area.

After talks lasting nearly an hour, House of Representatives Republican leader Robert Michel emerged clutching a map of Lebanon and told reporters:

Marines would be despatched to Lebanon."

Mr. Michel and House of Representatives Democratic Speaker most." Thomas O'Neill emphasised that no agreement had yet been reached on evacuating Palestinian commandos surrounded by Israeli forces in West Beirut, a task for which Mr. Reagan has tentatively volunteered U.S. troops.

"There's no agreement by anybody over there," Mr. O'Neill said. "We haven't even been asked at the present time." Senator Charles Percy, chair-

> Sen. Percy said the despatch of U.S. troops would depend on a request from the Lebanese government and "absolute assurances and guarantees that they be there as peacekeeping forces and not to be engaged in combat of any shape

Mr. Percy said he believed the U.S. should also seek assurances from Israel that it would not move into West Beirut and that the Israeli government would resume serious negotiations on "autonomy" for Palestinians living in the occupied West Bank.

Mr. Michel said it was too early to say whether Congress would support the use of U.S. forces in Lebanon but he added that some congressmen were certain to oppose sending Marines to an areawhere there could be casualties.

He said he believed Mr. Reagan was now a little less optimistic about the possibility of a diplomatic solution because an apparent agreement to disengage had evaporated.

Uri Avnery telephoned Yasser Arafat's office from eastern Beirut expressing his desire to review the situation in West Beirut and to interview the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) leader. Within the hour Mr. Avnery received a phone call from the PLO office approving his request. He was told to arrive at the PLO checkpoint near Beirut Museum at 10 a.m. and to wait for a representative from Mr. Arafat's office. On Saturday July 3, at exactly 10 o'clock, Mr. Avnery arrived at the checkpoint accompanied by journalist Sarit Yishai, photographer Anat Sargosti and a German Television team. They were received by Mr. Arafat's office representative who took them to the family house of a PLO member from Galilee. Minutes later, Mr. Arafat arrived. Mr. Avnery asked to use his taperecorder and Mr. Arafat immediately granted him permission. The talk was conducted in English while the last part of the interview was photographed by the German Television. The meeting was also attended by poet Mahmoud Darweesh, Mr. Arafat's assistant for Israel affairs 'Imad Shakkour, PLO spokesman Mahmoud Al Labadi, and Mr. Ghazi Khouri, former assistant for 'Isam Sartawi, an adviser to Mr. Arafat. After that PLO representative in Beirut Shafiq Al Hout arrived. The following is the text of the interview translated from an Arabic translation of the Hebrew text by Ghazi Sa'adi in Al Ra'i.

Avnery: I am happy you received me for an interview after these long years. I am very sorry for the current situation.

Arafat: I am also happy to meet you in person. I have been reading your articles since 1967.

Avnery: In the Arabic version of Haolam Hazeh which was published then?

Arafat: Yes. In the Arabic ver-Sion. Avnery: 'Imad Shakkour worked Arafat: (Laughing) Really?

Avaery: This is really interesting. Mr. Shakkour left Israel shortly after the 1967 war. I have not seen him since then. I did not know he is one of your aides. I have known Ghazi Khouri for five or six years. Khouri: Seven years.

Arafat: The Israeli military rule does not realise the harm it is doing the Israeli people. They are very stupid. You cannot control another people with the force of arms. I will give you examples from different parts of the world: Where is Hitler and the mighty strength he possessed? Where is Attila the Hun who destroyed Europe. Where is the strength he enjoyed? You can rule by force for a period of time, a short period of time; but what next?

Avnery: Our problem is that some Israelis have been intoxicated with strength because the Jewish people have not possessed strength for a long period, and having obtained the strength, they have;

drunk with power. Arafat: This is the arrogance of strength. It is worthless, Avnery: A demonstration, called for by the Peace Now movement. will take place in Tel Aviv today.

Arafat: I would say: We are also human and have the right to live. Avnery: This a short but a very strong message. What do you think they should do?

Arafat: They work to carry out United Nations resolutions. We are not asking to have the moon. Avnery: The real problem facing peace lovers in Israel lies in convincing the Israeli public opinion that the complete solution of the problem is establishing a Palestinian state in the West Bank and Gaza with eastern Jerusalem as its capital. What do you think of this? Arafat: The real solution lies in United Nations resolutions. Avnery: Is it U.N. Security Resolution 242? Arafat: No. The Palestine National Council had rejected this resolution.

Avnery: Is it because it did not mention the Palestinians by name?

Arafat: Because it completely ignored the Palestinian people. This resolution was adopted after the 1967 war which Israel fought against the Arab armies. The Palestinian issue was then as it is now the crux of the whole issue. We are here, and this is a fact. Three Israeli divisions are besieging Beirut threatening to invade it; this is in addition to the navy and the air force. But can they solve the problem with this massive strength? Let them try. Avnery: Then when you talk about U.N. resolutions you are talking about all the U.N. resolutions? Arafat: Of course. We must tackle all the resolutions. You understand that Israel is the only state in the world established by a U.N. resolution. Israel is the only state that does not respect any United Nations resolutions. I shall give another shameful example: The current invasion of Lebanon was carried out by storming through the United Nations forces. The Israeli army did not respect the U.N. flag. There was coltant because you are not from the Third World. Yishay: We have a lot of Jews who came from the Third World. Avnery: Half of the Jews in Israel came from Arab countries.

Arafat: But they have been living in Israel for 33 years. Yishay: But the Jews who came from Arab countries hate the Arabs more than other Jews do. Arafat: I do not understand this. Avnery: Photographer Annat Avnery: I waited for many years for this interview. I want to tell you that the real problem is a lot of Israelis believe stories saying that the Palestinians will never agree to recognise Israel even within the context of a peace between a Palestinian state and the state of Israel. This is the only point that needs to be clarified so that every

Israeli man-in-the-street can understand: Do you want a peaceful solution based on mutual understanding, mutual respect and mutual recognition? Arafat: Forget the political expressions and tell me what the fate of the Palestinian people will be. What will the fate of the people living in this region be? I want to ask all the Jews of the world: What will be the fate of four million Avnery: They should return to the Palestinian state.

Arafat: What will their fate be? Will they remain refugees? Sharon has become the dictator in the region and he is asking us to leave. Where to? To Crete? Where should we go? To Cyprus? Where to? I am a human being. Our children have the right to live. And this is very simple, but it seems that the Israeli military rule is determined not to understand the situation, the fact and the future. Avnery: I believe...

Arafat: I am not worried about the future despite this large attack. It is an Israeli-U.S. show which includes eight divisions. This is shameful for the Israeli army. even from a technical point of view. I am not going to talk about the blood baths and the collective massacres committed against the Palestinians in southern Lebanon. in Al Rashidiyeh camp, in Burj Al Shimali and Ain Al Hilweh. I hope you get the chance to visit those places. Israeli citizens should go there to see the shame and witness this dirty war.

(PLO spokesman Mahmoud Al Labadi enters)

Avnery: I visited Sidon. Arafat: This is very important. I call on people from all over the world to come and see this superpower, to see the Israeli army massacring Palestinians and murdering their children, women and old people. Do the Israelis think that they are able to solve the problem with such operations of collective annihilation? Suppose they kill half a million Palestinians, three and a half will remain, this is a shameful oper-

Shakkour: Mr. Arafat stressed that no Palestinian ever expressed the intention to throw the Jews into the sea. But what is Gen. Sharon doing at this moment? He is sending us to graves in the desert. Arafat: To the desert. Shakkour: To graves in the desert.

Arafat: No. He is now throwing us into the sea while showing off in front of television cameras. Labbadi: I want to ask you: Does not this meeting between you and Chairman Arafat prove that we. want to coexist with the Jews?

Arafat (on a loud voice): Yes. We have declared this in our resolutions and that we want to coexist with all the Jews. We are not against the Jews. Labbadi: The representative of the Israeli Peace Now movement took part in Brussels yesterday in a meeting against the war. Avnery: I told Chairman Arafat a while ago that the Peace Now movement will organise tonight a mammoth anti-war demonstration and that many people in Israel do not support the war. If I am allowed to explain, I can say that the situation in Israel now is as follows: There is a minority in Israel which supports Begin and Sharon in their endeavour to destroy the Palestinian national entity and to annex the West Bank. However, these people are a minority. On the other hand, there is an Israeli minority against the war and wants to resolve the Palestinian problem. In the midst of these two minorities, there is the sweeping majority of the Israeli people which can be influenced on this or that side, and they should be influenced to join the side of peace.

Arafat: The Jews are a religious people strictly adhering to their faith, but the Israeli military regime corrupts all aspects of life as well as the spirit of Judaism. Avnery: The two peoples should be persuaded that peace is possible after a 100-year war between the Palestinians and the Israelis, and this is a very important thing. Arafat: But not through guns.

Avnery: Not through guns. Arafat: Not through guns or tanks. Even if this peace is achieved through guns and tanks, sooner or later we will find a way to overcome the guns and tanks. We are here. Do you know that this is the longest war between the Arabs and Jews.

Avnery: Yes. Arafat: It is the longest war, and I challenge this general or the Israeli generals to publish the real figures of the Israeli casualties. As far as I am concerned, I have published the right figure of our casualties. The dead and wounded in our ranks totalled 30,000. Yishai: How many people were killed? Arafat: Roughly 10,000 to 11,000 people were killed and some 18,000 to 19,000 people were wounded. The number of dead and wounded totalled some 30,000. Avnery: How many Palestinian fighters were killed?

Arafat: We do not publish such figures in wartime, because the number of military casualties cannot be announced while the fighting is still going on. Ten thousand Palestinians are still missing-and this is very important-and there are hundreds of thousands of Palestinian and Lebanese refugees, including women and children.

Labbadi: Refugees for the third

Arafat: Yes, for the third time, and some of them for the fifth time, because they evacuated the south to the north and the north to the south.

Yishai: Do you have even one single Israeli prisoner? Shakkour: There is one prisoner only-the pilot. He is a war pris-.

Yishai: When you say that we cannot live within one state and there should be two states, what part of the country the other state should be established on?

Arafat: We have suggested-we the victims with 60 per cent of my people being refugees without shelter and without a homeland-two solutions. We proposed the first solution in 1969 and the proposal was that we all live in a democratic secular state-Jews, Christians and Muslims. But this proposal was turned down. We proposed the second solution in 1974 and it was submitted by the Palestine National Assembly. It included our preparednes to live in any part of Palestine after the Israelis withdraw from it or it is liberated from them.

Avnery: This means the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Arafat: Any part regardless of what it is, I am presenting to you the accurate formula and phrases of our resolutions. You should not forget that I was elected to my post on the strength of these resolutions. The Palestine National Assembly has proposed the two solutions. But what about the other side, what has it proposed to .us? This was has made the volcanoes of the area crupt, and the battle is still going on until this moment. We might reach a middle-of-the road solution. However, the important historic fact is that the Israelis have made these volcanoes erupt and that the Israeli government is a very палтоw-minded government.

Of course, the video has brought about much competition with cinema; one can see at home all the old and new creations of the cinema. Personally, I am a big movie fan. This is why, the other day, I went (or maybe I should say ventured) downtown to a cinema. The first impression I got was of indescribable things floating everywhere. An awful smell, a mixture of cigarettes and sweat struck me. Neglecting this first bad impression, I made my way through the groups of careless people blocking the passages and totally unwilling to make way.

I more or less made my way through to a chair (the term is too enerous believe me), the most decent amongst the rest. Seated, I looked around me, a carpet of watermelon seeds, chocolate wrappers, chewing gum and other candies covered the ground. And as if to give us a preview of what is in store for us during the presentation of the film, spectators came in each carrying an impressive bag full of nuts and other delicacies.

Wishing still to be patient I told myself that the projection of the film will make me forget this horrendous scenery.

Once the lights went off, I sighed with relief, but not for long. Deafening whistles greeted the hero of the film, not forgetting the comments expressed loudly and sometimes accompanied by gesticulations that blocked the screen.

Having had enough, I left the Cinema not without having queaked a few chairs and walked on all sorts of wrappings. Breathing the fresh air outside, I had to admit when all is said and done, in Amman video is a blessing....

Egyptian universities to accept student applications next month

AMMAN (Petra) — The Ministry of Education says that Egyptian universities will start accepting students applications for the 1983 academic year towards the end of next month. But in a statement issued Wednesday the ministry warned that no applications will be accepted for students wishing to study engineering or medicine.

The statement said that students must submit their applications to Egyptian embassies in Arab countries. An application can be considered accepted only when it is endorsed by the university or college at which the student wishes to continue his studies, the statement said.

The cable said that the Palestinian people "strongly cling to their national homeland and insist on practicing their legitimate right in their land, and that they strongly reject all plans aimed at liquidating their rights in Palestine and imposing Israel's domination on them." The American administration is widely misled and affected by erroneous and deceptive influences with regard to the Palestinian people and their cause, and this has resulted in great damage to America's reputation and endangered its interests in the region," the cable said. Furthermore, it said, the United States and Israel have been offering proposals and plans that "do not respond to the Palestinian demands. The Palestine Lib-eration Organisation (PLO) is the sole representative of the Palestinian people and is the only voice of the Palestinians, and therefore it is impossible for any brutal force to destroy the PLO," the cable emphasised. It said the U.S. should "recon-

Iran, Iraq locked in Gulf battle for Saudi Arabia, Jordan and forces.

Diplomats in Baghdad believe .hat Iraq could now expect strong popular support in the wake of any Iranian invasion.

The military experts in Beirut said the Iraqi army will have more incentive to fight to defend its own territory than it had to wage war inside Iran.

Military experts in Beirut said the impact of the Iranian invasion could be enormous if the Iranians crossed the Shatt Al Arab waterway and reached Basra, in which half a million people live and is a major oil and industrial centre.

The Iranian troops would be on op of iraq's main southern oilields.

They would also be only two nours drive from the oilfields of neighbouring Kuwait, which has supported Iraq with billions of dolars during the war and whose territory has been attacked several times by the Iranian air force.

The official TASS news agency said the talks, which were not announced in advance, covered pressing international issues of common interest." It did not give sent a message to President Reagan last week warning him against sending troops into Beirut to oversee a withdrawal of PLO commandos. President Reagan has said he is

Non-aligned meeting

In Nicosia. Iran's new assault on Iraq provoked uncertainty among Non-Aligned Movement delegates assembling here to discuss the situation in Lebanon.

Officials of the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) privately admitted fears that their case might be smothered in a welter of rhetoric and recrimination over the Iranian attack.

At least 43 nations are expected to send representatives to the meeting, starting Thursday, of the co-ordinating bureau of the 98-member Non-Aligned Movement.

The conference was called specifically to discuss Israel's invasion of Lebanon.

Some delegates told Reuters they expected Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Vellayati to try to turn the conference into a forum for denouncing Iraq. "If he does this," one Arab delegate said, "he will be told the subject is not on the agenda. We tinians, not about Iran."

Increased fears

The swoops over Beirut by Israeli jets Wednesday and a large explosion in the city centre Tuesday have increased fears among West Beirut's half-million civilians that the ceasefire, the sixth since the siege began, would soon be broken.

The explosion killed one person and injured 40.

Reprisal attacks were also expected for an ambush by commandos on an Israeli patrol in the hills above Beirut Tuesday night in which six Israeli soldiers were wounded.

Israeli officials have said that although they are prepared to give more time for the peace talks to succeed they are considering limited military strikes in the meantime.

But there were signs that an Israeli blockade of the western sector of the capital was easing slightly. According to radio and correspondents' reports, traffic was allowed at least some free access through the three main crossing points from rightist controlled East Beirut during the day. There was a wide variety of fresh fruit and vegetables on sale for the third day running and few items of food appeared to be in short supply.

Morale raised

Palestinian - morale in West Beirut appeared likely to be raised by statements by U.S. Secretary of State-designate George Shultz. Mr. Shultz said in congressional confirmation hearings Tuesday that the situation in Lebanon showed the "legitimate needs and problems of the Palestinian people" had to be resolved.

The left-wing daily As Safir, sympathetic to the PLO, commented that Mr. Shultz's remarks were balanced and less hostile to the PLO than the attitude of his predecessor, Alexander Haig. Palestinian sources say the PLO is hoping to trade any agreement to withdraw from Lebanon, as demanded by Israel, for broader political recognition.

Mr. Shultz did not signal any imminent U.S. recognition of the PLO, but Palestinians believe that U.S. policy has shifted slightly in their favour since the resignation of Mr. Haig.

Kissinger opposes proposal

In Washington, former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. the architect of previous Middle East accords, said the United States should not be the chief negotiator in Lebanon or send American troops there as peacekeepers.

Dr. Kissinger, who hammered out agreements on disengagement of forces among Israel, Egypt and Syria in 1974 and 1975, appeared to criticise the Reagan administration's efforts to solve the critical situation in Lebanon brought about by Israel's invasion. "I'm extremely uneasy about the involvement of American troops, he said in a television interview on NBC's Today show. Dr. Kissinger warned. "We are likely to become the fall guy"--taking blame from all parties if anything goes wrong--and the presence of American troops would be used in the Arab World to show U.S.-Israeli "collusion" in

Israeli 'alternatives'

However, Israel is studying military alternatives to a full-scale assault on West Beirut but is prepared to let diplomacy run its course, senior Israeli officials said.

They reported that negotiations to get the PLO out of Beirut without a fight now appeared to be back to square one.

U.S. mediators still have to work out with the PLO which country will receive them, when they will leave and how a possible international force will supervise their withdrawal, a Foreign Ministry source said.

"We recognise that Israel is paying the price for waiting and that the PLO may benefit from the delay." the source said.

Judge policies, not people

ENTER George Shultz. As with all new senior American government officials who deal with foreign policy, the secretary of state-designate, Mr. George Shultz, brings to his post a great deal of experience with the world that necessarily will be curtailed by the need for American officials to subject their innate intelligence, rationality and humanity to the destructive forces of American electoral politics. Thus we feel it would be a naive and foolish thing for us or anyone else to assess George Shultz on the basis of his personal qualities. Americans who make and carry out foreign policy are uniformly lovely, wise people on the personal and human level; but the substance of foreign policy that flows down to the American foreign policy apparatus from the elected politicians in the White House and the Congress is the stuff of ogres. To confuse the two is an unnecessary exercise in pain.

Mr. Shultz has made an interesting statement to the Senate committee conducting his confirmation hearings. He talks of PLO participation in peace talks; he talks of the legitimate needs and problems of the Palestinians being "a central reality" of the Middle East that must be addressed and resolved urgently. He also tried to breathe life into the dead carcass of the Camp David "autonomy" talks, and talked of the PLO in terms of terroristic activity. For a senior American official talking on the record, one cannot expect much more than this confusing set of signals and thoughts. It is, on the whole, par for the course, more of the same menu of cold soup that we have had for many years. There are weak signs here that the Reagan administration is starting to understand where the Middle East is in relation to Poland and New Jersey and Afghanistan, and what makes the Middle East such a violent place, injected full of money and weaponry by violent superpowers. We look forward to hearing more of Mr. Shultz' thoughts.

Jordan's Arabic Press Editorials

Al Ra'i: What are Arabs waiting for?

As U.S. special envoy Philip Habib continues his suspect moves in Beirut, the Israeli invaders pursue their efforts to consolidate their positions around the city. Thus the Israeli American pressure is escalated against the Palestinians and the Lebanese fighters in West Beirut to force them to capitulate.

Nevertheless, the Palestinian fighters in Beirut are continuing the struggle against the American-Israeli enemy for the sixth week now, and are preventing the invaders from achieving their goals.

One thing is certain at the moment: Palestine Liberation Organisation's (PLO) determination will not waver nor will it allow the enemy to achieve his aim. The events in Lebanon indicate that the Palestinians will transform Beirut into another Stalingrad which means a during World War II. This comparison has angered the Israelis, but at the same time caused world politicians to reconsider events in Lebanon. Yet what causes surprise is that the Arabs have not taken any practical step at the national level despite their knowledge that Israel's aggression is directed against them all and not only against the PLO. The Arab action so far is very limited and is confined to the diplomatic field. The Arabs should confront the Israeli enemy at a pan-Arab level and with all means. Are the Arabs waiting to see a Palestmian Stalingrad so that they can later compose poems to praise heroism instead of taking up the struggle them-selves?

fight to the finish and no surrender to the enemy. President Mitterrand of France likened Israel's practices in Lebanon to those of the Nazis against a French village

Al Dustour: It is time for better U.S. policies

The handling of the Lebanese "crisis" by the U.S. raises astonishment because it is a strange bahaviour is the norms of international diplomacy. The U.S. is condoning Israel's invasion of Lebanon, a member of the United Nations, and is doing nothing to stop the invaders' practices against the inhabitants of West Beirut, Israel is exposing these inhabitants to hunger and thirst, pouring fire and bombs on their homes and displacing thousands of them in a desperate attempt to force the fighters to capitulate. The U.S. is not only ignoring all this but is also allowing itself to be used diplomatically and militarily to serve Israel's purposes and goals. The U.S. does not seem to be a superpower any more. It is just playing the role of a postman carrying messages between Menachem Begin and President Sarkis or PLO chief Yasser Arafat.

Italians' veneration and affection granted to Pertini

By Stuart Harris Reuter

ROME - Most Italians take a cynical view of politicians but make an exception of their popular President Sandro Pertini, 85. who celebrated his fourth year in office last week.

Ask an Italian about politicians and you are likely to hear a world-weary account of intrigues. scandalous rumours, party power struggles and corruption in high places. Ask about President Pertini and the reply will probably be tinged with tones of veneration and affection.

In the words of Giorgio Amendola, a prominent Communist and fellow wartime partisan. "he represents an Italy that is still far away but which is the only possible

He was elected with an unprecedented majority in 1978 after President Giovanni Leone resigned in a tax-returns scandal. Since then, he has won the country's heart with a mixture of personal integrity, political stubbornness and charm.

President Pertini can afford to stand above daily tussles and factional interests, as his office carries few real powers. Nevertheless he has occasionally stretched his brief in defence of political stability, telling feuding coalition partners that Italy wants action on its problems, not crises.

Last year, the president called on Republican Giovanni Spadolini to become Italy's first prime minister since World War II who was not a member of the Christian Democrats. Since then, he has nudged the five-party coalition over several crises.

The president's best-known salvage operation was in April. when Christian Democrat Treasury Minister Nino Andreatta was said to have insulted the socialists. who threatened a crisis. He allowed Socialist leader Bettino Craxi to say the president condemned the insult then completed the balancing act by praising Mr. Andreatta's abilities. The crisis blew over. The lefetist Rome daily La Republica summed up the situation in a cartoon parodying Leonardo Da Vinci's "Last supper" with a pipe-smoking Pertini hovering as a holy ghost above the coalition surrounding Mr. Spadolini in the place of Jesus.

Direct mass appeal

While Mr. Pertini's stabilising influence has won friends among the politically minded, his stand against violence and corruption have a more direct mass appeal. When southern Italy was devastated by an earthquake in 1980, he spent two days among the victims and unleashed a scathing television attack on shoddy rescue actions: "There have been grave shortcomings and those who have failed must be punished."

He has regularly attended the numerous funerals of those killed in political violence, sharing with the bereaved unembarrassed tears and compassion nurtured through more than 20 years of suffering and struggles against the Fascist regime of Benito Mussolini.

With proven credentials as a fighter against oppression, Mr. Pertini has launched undiplomatic but hearfelt salvos in defence of human rights abroad, appealing to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, condemning the internal exile of physicist Andrei Sakharov and pointedly snubbing white-ruled South Africa. Not content to rely on a reputation for courage, he published a list of his possessions in accordance with his principle, "a scoundrel in politics is also a scoundrel in his private life."

On a typical day, the president starts with the newspapers. The news is often depressing, a palace aide said, adding he often looks care-worn by 10 o'clock.

Personal antidote

But the next hour is reserved for his personal antidote, a closed-door chat with up to 500 visiting school pupils.

"They ask him whatever they like, about terrorism, his marriage, anything, and he answers honestly. Maybe they'll make a lot of noise, but he loves it. He comes out looking unburdened. He calls it bathing in humanity," the aide

The president has received numerous heads of state, many from the Third World, as well as less official visitors, such as former world heavyweight boxing champ. ion Muhamman Ali.

"I pity the man who takes his place," the palace aide said, "he's so crystalline, so simple, but with incredible vitality. There's a relaxed atmosphere here, a sort of screnity among the staff. It will be hard act to follow."

The aide said that despite his 85 years, President Pertini is in excelient health and is accompanied by doctors only on intercontinental trips, telling them, "I need your friendship, not your work."

Alternative for PLO: Political entity or extremism?

By Patrick Worsnip Rewer

BEIRUT - When the Israeli siege of Beirut ends one way or the other, will the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO). archetypal armed guerrilla movement, change into a purely political grouping Will PLO leader Yasser Arafat. who eight years ago told the United Nations he bore a gun and an olive branch, now exchange his gun, battledress and chequered headcloth for the diplomat's business suit and briefcase? Middle Eastern politicians are asking these questions, regardless of whether the PLO fighters trapped in Beirut can be persuaded to leave Lebanon peacefully or whether they will make a last stand in the city streets as the Israeli tanks roar in.

The PLO, which two months ago had an estimated 20,000 men under arms. has lost thousands killed or taken prisoner and a vast quantity of weaponry since the Israelis invaded Lebanon on June

Cleaning up after the massacres!

PLO future not hopeless

Although the organisation still has troops intact in North and East Lebanon, as well as in other Arab countries, its future as a credible military force seems slender, at least for the next few years.

Units of the Palestine Liberation Army (PLA) have long existed in Syria, Jordan and Egypt under the strict control of the national armies in those countries. and these will presumably continue to exist. The PLO is pressing for a similar arrangement in liberation movement has rested on its independent forces under noexternal tutelage, and it is these which Israel is determined to neutralise, whether by force or negotiation. But there have been indications that the PLO leadership is now thinking in terms of a primarily political future. Source close to the talks under way in Beirut say the Palestinians are looking for some kind of political concession to compensate them for the military setback they have already suffered and will suffer still more if they leave Lebanon.

Middle East analysts believe greater diplomatic recognition. especially in Europe, for a more respectable PLO may be the kind of thing they are seeking.

Politicians of extremists

French and British officials have already voiced hopes that the present PLO leadership will be preserved as a political entity, for fear that its destruction could bring more extreme figures to the forefront of the Palestinian cause.

Analysts noted that the PLO had in any case been drifting for some time in the direction of diplomatic rather than military action to further its goals. Since the ceasefire concluded a year ago with Israel the organisation's diplomatic drive had been making headway, with more and more countries granting it some kind of official recognition.

This trend produced conflicts, however, with the PLO factions which favoured armed struggle first and foremost, and even the leaders styled moderate argued, until now, that the military and diplomatic approaches had to go hand in hand.

Any attempt to turn the PLO into a purely political organisation is certain to run into objections within its ranks that a liberation organisation with no guns will be as ineffectual as any governmentin-exile.

What Arabs like to see

Nevertheless, the notable failure of all Arab governments to render any significant assistance to the Palestinians in their unequalstruggle against Israel has suggested to many Middle East commentators that a disarmed PLO is what the Arabs too would like to see.

Arab reticence has been the target of tirades from the Palestinian news agency Wafa, which has observed that the combined military potential of the Arab 5.3 states far outstrips even Israel's formidable arsenal.

Ismailis from Bangladesh to Zaire celebrate the Aga Khan's silver jubilee

هكذا من النصل

THE AGA KHAN, 49th hereditary imam of the Shia Imami Ismaili Muslims, met July 11 with leaders of his community who had gathered from countries throughout the world -- including Bangladesh, Burundi, Canada, countries of Western Europe, India, Irac. Kenya, Kuwait, Malagasy Republic. Malaysia. Pakistan, Portugal, Rwanda, Singapore, Syria, Tanzania, the United Kingdom, the United States, South Africa and Zaire at Aiglemont, his secretariat near Paris, to mark the silver jubilee of his accession to the Immat.

The Ismaili community, numbering some 15 million, belong to the Shia branch of Islam, one of its two major branches, and lives over 25 countries. During the coming year, they will be contributing to special national silver jubilee funds to assist in the further development of existing social welfare and economic development institutions as well as the creation of new ones. Major institutions in these par-. ticular fields were established in Asia and Africa following the jubilees of the late Aga Khan, Sir Sultan Mohammad Shah. During his 72 years as imam, his community celebrated his golden, diamond and platinum jubilees, demonstrating their devotion and loyalty with symbolic weighing nonies, a tradition in Asia at that time. The proceeds from these ceremonies were used for the establishment and development of a wide range of projects including primary health care centres, hospitals, housing cooperatives, schools, banks and insurance companies, as well as scholarship programmes, which from the outset were open to all regardless of race and religion. The jubilees are symbolic affirmations of the ties which link the imam and the community. They have no real religious significance, but serve to reaffirm the Immat's worldwide commitment to the improvement of the quality of life especially in the developing world. "It is the developing world," said the Aga Khan, "which is suffering most from the debilitating effects of recession. The projects marking my silver jubilee are conceived within the framework of this universal concern, and will emphasise that it is people who are the greatest asset of the poorest countries." The emphasis of this silver jubilee year, from July 1982 to Jly 1983, will therefore be on supporting a number of programmes related to health, nutrition, education and rural development, primarily in Asia and Africa. One of the major projects will be the building of a 721-bed teaching hospital in Karachi, Pakistan. forming part of the new international Aga Khan University. which will have additional faculties in other Third World countries as well as in the West.

The Shia Imami Ismaili Muslims, generally known as the Ismailis, belong to the Shia branch of Islam, one of the two major branches of Islam, the Sunni being the other. The Ismailis live in over 25 different countries, including India, Pakistan, Iran, Afghanistan, Syria, East Africa, the United Kingdom and North America, and also in parts of China and the Soviet Union.

As Muslims, the Ismailis affirm the fundamental Islamic Testimony of Truth, the Shahada, that there is no god but Allah and that Mohammad (Peace of Allah be upon him) is His Messenger. They believe that Mohammad was the last and final Prophet of Allah. and that the Holy Quran, Allah's final message to mankind, was revealed through him.

In common with other Shia Muslims, the Ismailis affirm that after the Prophet's death, Hazrat Ali, the Prophet's cousin and sonin-law, became the first imam the spiritual leader -- of the Muslim community and that this leadership (known as Imamat continues thereafter by heredity through Ali and his wife Fatima, the Prophet's daughter. Succession to Imamat, according to Shia doctrine and tradition, is by way of Nass (Designation), it being the absolute prerogative of the imam of the time to appoint his

but also with their material well-

Allegiance to the imam and adherence to the Shia Imami Ismaili faith have, according to the guidance of the imam of the time. given the Ismailis bonds of unity and a common identity. In a number of countries of their residence, the Ismailis have evolved a well-defined institutional framework through which they have, under the leadership and guidance of the imam, made farreaching progress in the educational, health, housing and economic spheres, establishing schools, hospitals, health centres, housing societies and a variety of social and economic development institutions for the common good of all citizens regardless of their race or religion.

In more recent times, the contributions of the 48th imam, Sir Sultan Mohammed Shah Aga Khan, to the Muslim World and his efforts to promote international understanding, especially his role as the president of the League of Nations, the forerunner of the United Nations, are recognised.

Born on December 13, 1936, in Geneva, the Aga Khan, son of Prince Aly Khan and Princess Tajuddawlah, spent his early childhood in Kenya and then attended Le Rosey School in Switzerland. It was whice he was a student at Harvard University that he became imam of the Ismailis, succeeding his grandfather, Sir Sultan Mohammed Shah Aga Khan, on July 11, 1957. Two years later he graduated from Harvard University with an Honours degree in Islamic History.

The Aga Khan's family has followed a tradition of service in international affairs. His grandfather, the previous Aga han, was president of the League of Nations. Since the present Aga Khan assumed the office of Imamat 25 years ago, there have been fundamental political and economic changes in many of the countries where his community

It is in this context that he directs an increasing number of philanthropic and development projects whose benefits are available to all, regardless of race or religion. The Aga Khan Foundation, for example, is a noncommunal organisation established in 1967, which has become the primary agency of the Imamat's humanitarian and social welfare activities. The Foundation is recognised by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) as a Non-Governmental Organisation (NGO) and also cooperates with other international agencies active in parallel fields such as the World Health Organisation (WHO) and UCICEF. The Aga Khan, accompanied by his wife, Begum Salimah, will visit members of the Ismaili com- ! from munity throughout the world during the coming year and will inaugurate a number of silver jubilee projects.

Hinault recaptures tour's lead

VALENCE D'AGEN, France (R) - Bernard Hinault of France recaptured the lead in the Tour de France cycle race from Australia's Phil Anderson Wednesday when 'he finished second in the 11th stage, a 57-km time trial.

Dutchman Gerrie Knetemann won the stage in an impressive one hour 17 minutes and 29 seconds. in spite of problems with a damaged rear wheel over the last two kilometres.

Knetemann moved up to second place overall, just 14 seconds behind Hinault.

Anderson, who has held on to the leader's yellow jersey for the last nine stages, looked exhausted in the final part of the circuit and crossed the line in 12th place. more than three minutes behind Knetemann.

But the French favourite made a late recovery to finish 18 seconds short of Knetemann, Daniel Willems of belgium was third.

Easy 2nd round for Clerc in WCT tourney

ZELL AM SEE, Austria (R) -Top seed Jose Luis Clerc of Argentina cruised through to the second round of the $300,000 World Championship Tennis (WCT) tournament here when he defeated Brazil's Joao Soares 6-1.

Italy's Corrado Barazzutti. seeded number eight, became the second seed to go out when he lost to unseeded American Tony Giammalva.

Salnikov equals own record

KIEV, Soviet Union (R) - Vladimir Salnikov of the Soviet Union equalled his own world record of three minutes 49.57 seconds for the 400 metres freestyle Wednesday at the Soviet Swimming Championships here.

Salnikov. 22, who won three gold medals at the 1980 Moscow Olympics, set the record in Moscow on March 12 this year.

Controversial soccer tour goes ahead despite FIFA opposition

controversial soccer tour of South Africa by a group of international professionals got a press preview here Wednesday with only eight of the planned 18-man squad in the

The six-match tour, which sponsors say will cost 1.78 million rand ($1.55 million), will open on Friday night in Cape Town against an invited side made up from local professional teams.

The eight players already in the country, led by Argentine star Osvaldo Ardiles, were introduced at a press conference in Johannesburg, but tour organisers refused to allow them to reply directly to questions. "We are happy to be here and we would like to play as best as we can," was all that Ardiles would say to reporters.

John Barnwell, the former manager of relegated English first division side Wolverhampton

JOHANNESBURG (R) — A multinational touring side, said five more players will arrive Thursday and others were expected later.

As well as Ardiles, the other players already in South Africa are Argentine striker Mario Kempes, Yugoslav goalkeeper Milja Aleksic, Belgian World Cup player Fons Bastijns and English players Gordon Smith, Brian Greenhoff, Barry Powell and Calvin Plummer.

Plummer, 19, who plays for, Nottingham Forest, is the only black in the squad. Smith plays for Tottenham Hotspur, Greenhoff for Leeds United and Powell for Derby County.

Barnwell told reporters that the five players arriving Thursday were Britons Mick Channon and Dave Watson, both of Southampton. Stuart Pearson of West Ham, Geoff Merrick of Bristol City and David Nish, currently with the Vancouver Whitecaps of Wanderers who will manage the the North American Soccer Lea-

George Thabe. President of South Affrica's Multi-Racial Football Council, told reporters after a meeting Wednesday his body had agreed to the tour because it believed it would benefit the development of soccer here. The game is played and watched mainly by Blacks in South Africa.

British television soccer presenter and Coventry City club chairman Jimmy Hill who has joined the tour as a spokesman. said all the players were either in between contracts or had their contracts suspended temporarily by their clubs for the duration of the tour in order to avoid any reprisals by the international soccer controlling body, FIFA.

South Africa was expelled from FIFA in 1976 because of its race segregation policies. This tour, the first of its kind to south Africa for nine years, is going ahead despite FIFA's opposition.

Stadler seems set to take advantage of Watson, Nicklaus duel at British Open golf

TROON, Scotland (R) - If Tom Watson and Jack Nicklaus become locked in a private duel at the British Open Golf Championship starting Thursday, Craig Stadler may move in and outclass them both. Stadler, dubbed 'the walrus', has carned a reputation for losing his temper along with his leads in several tournaments during his golfing career. But after winning this year's U.S. Masters and heading the U.S. money list, the bigname players can no longer afford to ignore him.

Moustachioed Stadler could be on the brink of a series of major titles which would put him alongside the likes of Nicklaus and Watson.

More often seen scowling or burying his club in the ground after a fluffed shot, Stadler arrived at Troon Tuesday in a decidedly congenial mood, and not at all surprised by his success at the Masters.

"I never doubted in my own mind that I could win a major. I felt it was just a question of time."

Few problems for champions Villa

European cups' draw announced

ZURICH. Switzerland (R) -European soccer champions Aston Villa should have few problents negotiating the first round of this season's competition.

In Wednesday's draw here the English Champions were paired with Besiktas Istanbul of Turkey. who will be making their first appearance in the European Cup since the 1967-68 season.

Villa, who won Europe's premier club competition at their first attempt by beating three times winners Bayern Munich of West Germany 1-0 in the final in Rotterdam, and Liverpool are charged with the task of continuing England's domination of the competition.

The trophy has remained in England for the past six years--for three of them in the Liverpool trophy cabinet.

Like Villa, they appear to have an easy first round, being paired with Irish part-timers Dundalk.

Seasoned European Cup campaigners CSKA Sofia of Bulgaria. who surprisingly toppled Liverpool in the quarter-finals last year, face a tough test against French champions Monaco.

But their task is nothing com-pared to what faces Danish champions Hvidovre Copenhagen, who have been paired with Juventus.

No Italian club has won the European Cup since AC Milan in 1969 and, buoved by Italy's recent triumph in the World Cup, Juventus are bound to take some stop-

The part-timers of Hvidovre face the daunting challenge of trying to keep out Paolo Rossi, leading scorer in the World Cup with six goals, five other first-choice Italian World Cup players and recent international recruits Zbigniew Boniek of Poland and Michel Platini of France.

West Germany, who dominated the European Cup between 1974 and 1976 through Bayern Munich, have Hamburg carrying their hopes this season.

They will be anxious to make up for losing 4-0 to Swedish club Gothenburg in the two-leg final of the European Football Union (UEFA) Cup when they meet Dinamo Berlin of East Germany in the first round.

Real Sociedad have the onerous task of bringing a smile back to the face of Spanish soccer after the disappointing showing by the national team in the World Cup.

They have been paired with Vikingur of Iceland and should at least fare better than last season when they were bundled out in the first round by CSKA.

One of the best first round ties pits three times winners Ajax Amsterdam of the Netherlands against Scottish champions, Celtic, the first British club to win the European Cup.

The first round draws for the

First quadruple somersault performed by Mexican trapeze artist Vazquez

TUCSON. Arizona (R) - Miguel Vazquez, a member of the Flying Vazquez aerial team, has become the first trapeze artist to perform a quadruple somersault at a circus performance--a feat which has eluded flying trapeze artists in the 120 year history of the skill.

Vazquez, 17, accomplished the unprecedented manoeuvre 15 metres above the hushed audience at a performance of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey Circus here last Saturday night.

After completing four backward revolutions at a speed of about 125 km an hour, the teenager from Mexico locked hands with his 'catcher,' his 31-year-old

Vazquez had first accomplished a quadruple somersault during a practice session in California last August 18. Since then he had performed the feat 10 times in practice sessions, but failed to accomplish the manoeuvre during a public performance.

Experts had doubted that the catcher would have the physical strength to hold the flyer. He hangs upside down from a trapeze and must time his swings to perfection to catch his partner at explosive speed.

Vazquez is also one of only 12 aerialists to have performed a triple somersault since it was first achieved in 1897.

The 11-day strike by 25.000 drivers over plans for flexible work schedules has reduced services on the 17,430 kilometre network from about 17,000 trains a day to a few hundred.

The Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Fire-men (ASLEF) called the strike to protest against plans to replace a guaranteed eight-hour working day with more flexible schedules.

Railwaymen had accepted the idea of flexible rosters and was not on strike.

British Rail (BR) said the new schedules were necessary to improve services and cut heavy losses, which have been running at £175 million ($315 million) a

Japan to prepare new 79-85 plan

TOKYO (R) - Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Wednesday told his advisers to prepare a new five-year economic plan for Japan to replace the 1979-85 programme, after two years in which growth has been well below the 5.1 per cent average envisaged.

Meanwhile, International Trade and Industry Minister Shintaro Abe said that growth could slump further in the fiscal year ending next March to around two per cent, instead of the 5.2 per cent target. unless the economy was given a boost. The economic planning agency announced that Mr. Suzuki had asked his advisory panel, the economic council, to work out a new five-year plan to replace the existing seven-year programme. He said replacement of the present national plan was necessary because of a change in the economic situation both in Japan and abroad, a reference to the effects of recession. After an annual rise in gross national product of between 5.1 and 5.3 per cent between 1976 and 1979, Japan recorded 3.7 per cent growth in 1980 and 2.7 per cent in 1981.

Official sources said government leaders are split, with some advocating a goal of four per cent real growth in the new 1983-87 plan and others wanting two to three per cent.

Exporters agree on handling copper prices

LIMA (R) — The world's main copper exporters have agreed on joint action to boost the depressed international price of the metal.

A communique issued Tuesday night at the end of a conference of the inter-government Council of Copper Exporting Countries (CIPEC) said the eight member states had also agreed to create a commission to study further forms of joint action.

Copper prices have fallen from an average of 99 cents per pound in 1980 to less than 70 cents

Chinese attend course in American business

DALIAN, China (R) - About the main aim of the course was to 175 Chinese factory managers. administrators and economists are attending a unique course in American business and management methods in this northern to reject. Chinese port city.

The Chinese officials from state-owned enterprises are studying capitalist techniques and appear to be assimilating them

The course, now in its third year, brings students to roughly the level of Master of Business Administration (MBA) in just five

More than 20 Americans, mainly academics but also including businessmen from General Electric and other leading companies, are teaching the course. which was started in 1980 by the U.S. Commerce Department and the Chinese State Economic Commission.

The dean of the U.S. faculty, Mr. Richard Holton, told Reuters train Chinese personnel in Western business methods, allowing them to decide for themselves which aspects to accept and which

Professor Holton, of the University of California, Berkeley, said almost the entire content of the course was related to local conditions despite the enormous differences between American and Chinese business practices.

"Chinese students are extremely interested in what is going on in the West, but they are not so good at applying their knowledge here." he added. But Professor Holton also citied the example of a factory manager who took part in last year's course and used American techniques to prove that there was a market for ightweight aluminium bicycles.

Production is to start next year. The ex-student asked his teachers not to divulge details of his plans to other factories because he was afraid they might steal his idea and offer unfair competition.

One of the most controversial aspects of the course is its use of simulation exercises in which students are each allotted a certain amount of imaginary capital and then have to make decisions on its use just as if they were running a real business. Professor Holton said that last year one student was at first extremely suspicious of this highly capitalist game, but later admitted he could not sleep because he had become so involved in trying to become a millionaire.

Under a government agreement, the course is to take place each year from June to November until at least 1984, and both sides hope it will be extended for several more years.

It was established under the Carter administration, and escaped President Reagan's stringent budget cuts apparently because it costs little to run.

Professor Holton said the total cost to the United States was $165,000 annually, and that salaries and travel expenses were reject." shared equally by China and the He said one of the main prob-

Mr. Lei Tianyue, president of Dalian Institute of Technology where the course is held, said the fact that the course taught capitalist methods did not worry him.

The language problem also pre-sents severe difficulties as China has few skilled interpreters. Few of the students have a good command of spoken English, although many can read it quite well, so all lectures have to be translated. doubling the time necessary for each class.

The average age of students is about 42, remarkably young in a country where senior administrators such as factory managers tend to be elderly and often poorly qualified. Less than 10 per cent of the students are women.

New leader sets out to unite Spanish Centrists

MADRID (R) - The newly elected leader of Spain's ruling Centrisis set out Wednesday to reunite his divided party in the face a mounting Socialist challenge for general elections due within the next nine months.

Congress speaker Landelino Lavilla, a former justice minister, was elected president of the Union of the Democratic Centre (UCD) Tuesday night and given emergency powers to rebuild the movement's shartered image.

He won the right to appoint the party's secretary general and choose those who would draft lists of candidates for the election. Political sources said he might also force a government reshuffle.

Disagreements within UCD revolve around whether the party should make alliances to beat the Socialists, who are favoured to win the next general elections. The UCD policy-making body wants to go it alone, but Mr. Lavilla has been non-committal.

Politicians have been worried that the UCD crisis could create a dangerous power vacuum in Spain's fragile democracy, which has already been shaken by an attempted military coup last year. Prime Minister Leopoldo Calvo Sotelo, who resigned the UCD presidency last week after failing to overcome divisions and stop defections, said the party crisis

Only two-thirds

But Mr. Lavilla, a Christian Democrat, won only two-thirds of the votes in Tuesday's stormy meeting of the UCD's policymaking body as reformist supporters of former Premier Adolfo Suarez abstained.

Political sources said the abstentions threatened a new split within UCD, already hit by desertions from its left and right wings. Mr. Suarez, who led UCD to election victories in 1977 and 1979, boycotted the meeting Tuesday after failing to regain control over the party last week. He left Wednesday on a private visit to Venezuela and the sources said he might form his own party after his return next week.

Mr. Lavilla, a 47-year old former justice minister, held out an olive branch to Mr. Suarez, saying he would deeply regret his defection.

Most Social Democrats and several conservatives have already left UCD, a loose coalition of Social and Christian Democrats, liberals, conservatives and former Françoist officials.

Two new political parties, one liberal and the other Christian Democrat, will be formally created later this month. Their formation could drain more militants from UCD.

New Liberal Party

A new liberal party was launched Tuesday by 200 members of liberal clubs around the country. Led by lawyer Antonio Garrigues Walker, the new Democratic Liberal Party hopes to grab the Centrist vote it believes the UCD is losing.

Mr. Garrigues Walker said some Liberals in the UCD had decided to quit the ruling party and join his but he declined to name them.

Mr. Lavilla said he did not rule out alliance with Felipe Gonzalez's opposition Socialist Party. "It depends on the terms of the agreement and would have to include full respect for the essence

But he said he try over the next few months to develop a true Centrist Party "without mixings or of the party," he said.

British press blames cop for palace mishap

LONDON (R) - An intruder who woke Queen Elizabeth in her bedroom at Buckingham Palace got in because a policeman on duty outside had slipped off for a tea break, the London Times said Wednesday.

Other British newspapers said that palace police ignored an alarm triggered by the prowler in his Friday morning break-in and then were slow to respond to a telephone call for help because they misunderstood the queen's caim, controlled tone.

A royal chambermaid appeared after 10 minutes and led the man away after exclaiming "bloody hell, ma'am, what's he doing in here?" The queen was unharmed but the latest reports on the break-in have stoked a major row about the safety of the royal fam-

Some policemen have been transferred and security has been tightened. But calls from politicians and the press for the resignations of those responsible for the queen's safety have not been answered.

The Express said the queen was angered by what she saw as an offhand response by the govemment to the incident.

Passenger recalls agony on board 747 over Java

SYDNEY (R) — A passenger on board a jumbo jet which had two engines knocked out by a cloud of volcanic dust over West Java said Wednesday the engines repeatedly burst into flame when the pilot tried to restart them.

Simon Townsend, of Sydney television, said from Jakarta in a telephone interview with an Australian newspaper that passengers had "looked death in the face...it was bloody awful. It was horrible.

The Singapore Airlines Boeing 747 with 251 people on board was forced to land at Jakarta Tuesday night after flying into the volcanic cloud over west Java.

Mr. Townsend said that an hour and a half out of Singapore he suddenly smelled burning and the cabin filled with volcanic dust, finer than talcum powder. Then two engines cut out.

"There was this eerie silence and everyone in the plane stopped what they were doing. We were very quickly losing altitude which I could feel because my ears were

Chinese paper British soldiers hurt accidentally challenges in Falklands sexual taboos

PEKING (R) — A Chinese newspaper called for greater sexual freedom Wednesday challenging widely held taboos in this highly puritánical country.

An article in the official Workers' Daily said Western attitudes to sex were more advanced than in China and attacked those who said sexual liberation was a bourgeois concept.

The author said that in an ideal Communist society people would be able to choose their partners with total freedom. Sexual liberation was an inevitable historical tendency and implied prog-behaviour and said history would prove that those who were condemned were innocent.

Israelis beat British woman in West Bank

OCCUPIED JERUSALEM (R) - A British woman said Wed. nesday she was beaten while held in jail for two days by largeli interrogators questioning her about her work at a Palestinian university in the Israeli-occupied West Bank, Ann Scott, 25, told reporters she was held after she accompanied two Palestinian students trying to retrieve their confiscated identity cards at Israeli headquarters in the West Bank town of Ramaliah Israeli police said she was arrested for incitement. The British consultand he was seeking an urgent meeting with Israeli Foreign Ministry officials to discuss her allegations. Miss Scott, from Skipton, West-Yorkshire, said she had been beaten by female interrogators with a baseball bat and obtained a doctor's certificate after her release on Tuesday testifying she had been treated for bruises. She had been working for three years on the staff of Birzeit University, considered a hot-bed of Palestinian nationalism by Israeli authorities. The university was closed down for three months by the Israelis at the weekend.

Israeli envoy in Britain recovers slowly

LONDON (R) - Shiomo Argov, the Israeli Ambassatior shot outside a London hotel last month, has regained consciousness and is able to speak, a hospital official said Wednesday. Mr. Argov, 52, was shot in the head on June 3 as he left a private. dinner party. Three Arabs have been charged with the attenue on his life. The day after the shooting, Israeli jets raided Palestinian targets near Beirut in reprisal and on June 6 Israeli troops invaded Lebanon. An official of the National Hospital for Nervous Diseases said Wednesday that Mr. Argov was eating and drinking normally and no longer needed a ventilator to assist his breathing. But he had suffered a lung clot. "This is common complaint associated with long periods of inactivity and the normal medical procedures have been used to treat this condition," she said. During an operation soon after the attack surgeons removed part of the ambassador's brain.

British archaeologist freed from Afghan

NEW DELHI (R) - British archaeologist Ralph Pinder Wilson flew to freedom in India from Kabul Wednesday after being released from a 10-year prison sentence in Afghanistan. Mr. Wilson, 66, had been sentenced last month after pleading guilty to removing archaeological finds from Afghanistan and indulging in "anti-revolutionary activities." He had been in detention in Afghanistan for four months following his arrest after working on an archaeological site near Kandahar. Afghanistan's second largest city. Mr. Wilson said the Afghan authorities had treated him well in captivity and he retained happy memories of his travels in Afghanistan. He had been in Afghanistan for several years as the director of the British Institute of Afghan Studies. Mr. Wilson was due to retire shortly before he was arrested on charges that he hired two Afghans to help him smuggle some 100 ancient coins worth about $50,000 out of Afghanistan. Two Afghans tried with Mr. Wilson were given jail sentences of six years and three

Soviets allegedly work on 3 new SS-20 sites

BRUSSELS, (R) - The Soviet Union is completing work on three more SS-20 missile bases and is expected to conclude its deployment programme by the Autumn, NATO sources said Wednesday. The three new bases of nine triple-headed missiles each would bring the SS-20 total to 342, carrying 1,026 warheads. Two bases are sited west of the Urals and one in the Asian part of the country, the sources said. The nearly-completed SS-20 programme is bigger and has been carried our faster than expected by NATO when it started in 1977. The missiles, with a 5,000-kilometre range, could strike anywhere in whole of Europe, most of Asia and North Africa.

The U.S. assistant secretary of state-designate, Richard Burt, said last month that Soviet statements about a unilateral freeze were misleading. They created the impression that Moscow had ceased deployment of the SS-20 in the European portion of the Soviet Resistance spokesman Evo Fernandes, the movement's only known voice outside Mozam-

This leaves the decrepit northernmost line between the Mozambican port of Nacala and Entrelagos as Malawi's main outlet to the East African coast. According to a report prepared for the Southern Africa Transport and Communications Commission (SATCC), the northern line faces collapse because of poor maintenance and the strains placed by the 400,000 tonnes of freight it handles a year. In May. Mozambique signed a

Warsaw quietly begins to release political internees

WARSAW (R) - Poland's mar- sident and Solidarity adviser Jacek tial law authorities have begun quietly to release some of its estimated 2,500 political internees as fugitive Solidarity leaders called in a leaflet made available Tuesday for a moratorium on strikes and demonstrations.

Some of those freed from camps and prisons around the country said they expected the flow to gather momentum.

The unpublicised releases began as underground leaders of the suspended Solidarity free trade union circulated their appeal for the suspension of strikes and demonstrations until the end of July and for reciprocal gestures from the authorities.

The leaflet, dated June 26 but released on the day marking the start of the eighth month of martial law, said the gestures should include the release of political internees and an amnesty for those punished under martial law

West led a low spade. Declarer ruffed and made his first key play by leading a low trump from hand. West won and continued with a spade and declarer ruffed again. Now he cashed the ace of trumps, and made his second excellent decision when he discarded a club from dummy instead of a spade!

Declarer led a club to dummy's queen, ruffed a spade, crossed to the queen of diamonds and ruffed dummy's last spade-by keeping all of dummy's spades, declarer was able to single in his low trumps. Now he was able to cash the king of diamonds for his eighth trick and continue with a third diamond.

If West did not ruff, declarer would take his minor-suit aces for his contract. So West was forced to ruff, but now he was end played. He could cash his last trump, but at trick twelve he was forced to lead from his king of clubs into declarer's combined A-J tenace. So declarer lost only three trump tricks on a hand where eight or nine tricks seemed to be the limit.
